A Lucky Break

Disclaimer: Okay, I know that I don't own any of this, you know I don't own any of this, but the wonderful people at Disney don't seem to know this, so I guess it's required that I put it in writing for the world to see. So there, you happy?

P.S. By the way, this is my first attempt at fanfic. The only reason I'm doing this is because in all the fanfic I have found no one has seemed to write something about Lucky returning. What's wrong with you guys, I'm even beginning to see Liz and Jason fanfic! This is crazy, what next Liz and Jax? Please, please give me feed back. Just try not to make it too violent, I tend to get very emotional.

P.P.S. I'm not really knowledgeable about Felicia and Faison, so if it's not exactly right, oh well

P.P.S.S. **Very important **This takes place before Luke is captured

The Discovery

Felicia paced back and forth in her cell. She had lost all concept of time since she had been captured by Caesar Faison. She missed her children and husband terribly, and even though she would never admit it to herself, she had missed Luke Spencer most of all. They had grown very close in their recent adventures together, closer than she would have liked, but never-the-less close. She dreamed of being rescued by Luke, him bursting through her door, sweeping her off her feet, and them running off into the sunset together, it was all that kept her going through this whole ordeal. So, when the door opened and Luke Spencer actually appeared she thought she was dreaming. Slowly, time began to come to a stop. She ran into his arms and they hugged for what seemed like an eternity. They broke apart when a loud siren began to wail, as they felt like their ears were about to explode, she looked up to Luke. "We don't have much time, we have to go," without missing a beat he grabbed her hand and they began to run down the seemingly endless labyrinth of corridors. Suddenly, gun shot was heard, and Luke pushed Felicia to the side. She could feel the bullets whiz by, burning her hair. Luke immediately grabbed a gun from his overcoat and began shooting back. He turned back to Felicia, "go," he yelled, "no, not without you!" He looked at her frustrated, he shot off 2 more bullets and turned back around, "I'll be right behind you now go," she saw the sincerity in his eyes, the general worry, that he might not make it out, and she ran. She ran, and ran until she had no idea where she was. She could hear footsteps from behind her, but she was too afraid to call out. Then she heard the sudden ring of gunshots, she saw a door to her right and quickly ran in. She slammed the door shut and looked through the small window, she could see two men run past the door and she sighed in relief. But her relief was short lived, when she realized she was not alone in the room. She held her breath, too afraid to turn around, but even more afraid not too. She slowly turned around to see a young man standing before her, "Felicia?" "Lucky?"
